"LOOKOUT TREE," HUGE CYPRESS IN FLORIDA, FELL BY THE WIND

By the Associated Press.

MOORE HAVEN, Fla., July 5.—The "lookout tree," a cypress believed to have been the largest in Florida, and which had stood for ages near the shore of Lake Okechobee, a short distance from the settlement of Belle Glade, has fallen. After withstanding violent storms, the big tree, forty-nine feet in circumference eight feet above the ground, toppled before a light gust of wind. Subsidings of the waters because of the drainage of the Everglades had resulted in a settling of the muck ground which left its roots undermined.

At the base of the tree was an artificial mound of sand believed to have been carried there from the lake shore by mound builders who once were inhabitants of the territory. The Indians or pre-historic people buried many of their dead in the mound, for numerous specimens of human bones have been recovered from it. One of the most interesting of these was a wrist-bone encircled by a crude handcuff, a recent discovery.

PICNIC PARTY IN WRECK.

Woman Dead and 23 in Hospital at Saratoga, N. Y.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 5.—Mrs. Emma Valentine, aged sixty, is dead, and twenty-three members of a Rensselaer boat party are in a Saratoga hospital, seven of them believed fatally injured, as a result of a Schenectady railway car crashing into the automobile truck in which they were returning from a holiday trip to Saratoga lake last night. The crash occurred at a crossing just south of Ballston Spa.

ASK TROOP WITHDRAWAL.

BERLIN, July 5.—Germany will demand the withdrawal of the colored French troops from the occupied zone, it was learned yesterday, in connection with her demands for the summary punishment of a Moroccan soldier charged with the murder of a young German girl near Idstein. The soldier is alleged to have assaulted and strangled the girl, Frieda Gjukke.

HUGHES CONDEMNS MENTAL VAGRANTS

National Educators Told Concentration Is Need of Schools.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, July 5.—The blessing of democracy will flow only "in so far as it represents the rule of an intelligent and cultured people," Secretary Hughes declared in a paper on the "Aims in American Education," read here last night before the National Education Association.

"The American ideal," the Secretary said, "and it must be maintained if we are to mitigate disappointment and unrest, is the ideal of equal educational opportunity, not merely for the purpose of enabling one to know how to earn a living, and to fit into an economic status more or less fixed, but of giving play to talent and aspiration and to the development of mental and spiritual powers."

The increased demand for educational opportunities and the extraordinary efforts to supply new facilities, particularly for higher education, were encouraging, Mr. Hughes said, but he added that there was a danger of "the danger of the respect to the standards and aims" of education.

Vocational training, the teaching of the means to earn a livelihood, he said, would be taken care of, but he added:

"Democracy cannot live on bread alone. It is not enough that one shall be able to earn a living, or a good living. This is the foundation but not the structure. What is needed is to have life more abundantly. It was important, Mr. Hughes contended, that 'the door of hope be kept open' by maintaining opportunities and standards of general education. 'That is the only way to stand amid the direct necessities and with slender advantages the chance to rise.'"

"This is of especial importance to our working people," he continued, "who are not to be viewed as mere economic units, but as our co-laborers in the great enterprise of human progress."

As to educational standards he said: "It is impossible to provide a system of general education and ignore the need of discipline. The sentimentalists are just as dangerous as the materialists."

Life, Not Pastime.

"Life is not a pastime and democracy is not a holiday excursion. It needs men trained to think."

"The sentimentalist must not be allowed to ruin us by dissipating the energy that should be harnessed for our varied needs."

The true object of education was to give training "which will enable one to make the most—that is the best—of one's self," Mr. Hughes said, adding:

"We must realize that the foundations should be laid in few studies of the highest value in self-discipline. This means self-denial, hard work, the inspiration of teachers with vision, and an appreciation of the privileges and obligations of citizenship in democracy."

In elementary schools this meant training "which insists, at whatever cost," the Secretary said, "on the mastery by the student of the subject before him—on accuracy, the lack of which, I regret to say, is now conspicuous in students of all grades."

Insists on Fundamentals.

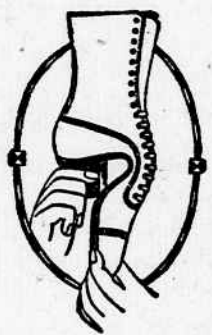

In high schools and academies, he said, it meant "that we should stop scattering" in the present "bewildering and unsuccessful attempt at comprehensiveness. A few fundamental, substantial studies, 'thoroughly mastered' should be substituted, he said, adding:

"I am not of those who believe in the classical and mathematical training, and I do not think that we have found any satisfactory substitute for it. But the important point is the insistence upon concentration and thoroughness."

Mr. Hughes held that too much had been done in colleges to encourage "intellectual vagaries" so that a "college education, outside of technical schools, may mean little or nothing."

"We have sent too many men to the demands of training for citizenship," he said. "That implies adequate knowledge of our institutions, of their development, and actual working. It means more than this in a world of new intimacies and complexities. It means adequate knowledge of other peoples, and for this purpose there is nothing to take the place of the humanities, of the study of literature and history."

Mr. Hughes explained that he meant not history of the distant past, but recent history "with sufficient acquaintance with the past to understand the extraordinary happenings and development which have taken place in our own time."

Consider the Importance of Your Feet

The arch bones of your foot are not rigid. Your foot arch is not like a piece of masonry. The bones form four flexible arches in each foot (the inner and outer longitudinal and the transverse arches of the instep; and the anterior metatarsal arch of the ball of the foot). These bones maintain their arched formation only because of the ligaments, tendons and muscular structure which surround them and hold them. Thus, your arches are flexible and provide the resilience that you enjoy unconsciously.

Why not keep the foot resilient, springy and efficient? Why not keep the muscles in good health so that they will have strength to uphold the arch structure? Why not avoid "weak foot," "fallen arches."

Freedom Is Necessary.

If you could live your life in your stockinged feet, you would experience perfect circulation and strengthening exercise of the arch muscles. The foot, being unstrained, would get its natural flexible action as you walked. That would keep it well.

Almost the same ideal condition is obtained by wearing Cantilever Shoes, which are flexible and shaped naturally, giving freedom to the foot and more comfort than can be found in the majority of shoes. Try Cantilevers. Keep your feet in condition. Life is a drag if your feet go back on you.

Cantilever prices are right; quality is excellent.

P. L. Refrigerator

The small first payment on our club plan delivers a refrigerator that saves many dollars in ice bills, food and perhaps a big doctor bill.

The nationally advertised makes included in Phillip Levy's Refrigerator Clubs are built to preserve food—because the constant "dry-cold" air circulates in all food chambers.

The patented insulation within the extra walls makes it impossible for the cold air to escape. This is only one of the many reasons why refrigerators shown here are tested and approved by good housekeeping institutes.

Phillip Levy's Refrigerator Club brings to your home a sanitary metal-lined refrigerator—the snowy-white porcelain lining is easily cleaned—no cracks for dirt or germs to lurk in.

Finally, Phillip Levy's 35 years of accumulated thought and judgment and wholesale buying is "bought into" every refrigerator on display. Whether you pay spot cash or pay while using it—either way—you get our iron-clad guarantee.
